

CORPORATE PARTNERS CLIME

As the first fund management organisation to partner with the AES, Clime is leading the way in Indigenous education and employment for the Australian funds management industry.

Michael Kloeckner, Director of Private Clients at Clime, and his team, are avid supporters of the AES and the work it undertakes to provide vocational training, mentorship, support and guidance for Indigenous Australian career seekers.

Clime became a corporate partner to make a difference in the community. Michael says, "although there is a personal element of giving back, if Clime can do this as a business the impact we have is much more powerful."

In November 2011, Clime will be taking on an AES School Based Trainee of its own. This entry-level position will provide an opportunity for the trainee to assist and support in analytical and evaluation work.

Passion is the one quality Clime is looking for in a trainee. Michael believes the most enriching part of this traineeship is that it is not a job they are applying for, rather a company that can provide an individual with a career.

Michael Kloeckener admits, "Clime cannot do enough justice to this partnership with the AES. Danny Lester's vitality, authenticity and passion is rare to see. The AES' vision and individualism in the way that they conduct their mentoring programs was attractive to myself, and the Clime team."

By being the first funds management organisation to join forces with the AES, Clime is showcasing their industry to corporate and Indigenous Australia.

"It is time for Indigenous youth to create a metamorphosis within Corporate Australia – all of which is possible with Danny Lester and the AES".
